

Alan Albert: Two Poems [1]

May 5, 2014 Featured Poetry [2]

A Small Wedding

Everyone who came made an agreement to shut up when the priest pressed his hands together. It was winter when the small wedding happened. Everyone was no taller than six inches. But they were adorable, especially the outfits. The men, of course, looked like men always do. But the women had the most profoundly attractive ensembles. They'd gone to a special designer shop devoted to small women. In fact, tiny. The designer herself was only three inches high, and for her the clothes she made were like huge blankets or, for that matter, sails. But she loved color and splash and the challenge of coming up with just the right thing. It was her shop, after all. Everyone had to call ahead and make appointments for measurements and so forth. One group came in and quickly filled the shop. A cop came by and looked in because there were so many people. But he walked away quickly when he saw what was happening and the size of everyone.

The Invention of Loneliness

Alan Albert: Two Poems

Published on Talking Writing (<https://talkingwriting.com>)

There were three German physicists reportedly working on the problem
at the same time. One of them, Krupp, came up with a way
of leaving the tears out. Another, Russell, was beginning
to understand sweets
and their relationship to recovering. Duncan, the third, discovered a new filament that would allow a more reliable depletion of energy. The person actually credited with the invention
of low-cost marketing of what we now refer to as The Big L
was Edgar Bullough,
a worker at Crythe, a small manufacturing plant in Wilmington. He had found a way to affix invisible ribbons
of sadness to the newborn.

Art Information

- "Dance Floor [3]" © Tim Baker; Creative Commons license.

Alan Albert's work has appeared in the American Poetry Review, Black Warrior Review, Kansas Quarterly, Poetry East, Southwest Review, and many other journals. He has been awarded Artist Residencies from both the Vermont Studio Center in Johnson, Vermont, and The Banff Centre for the Arts in Alberta, Canada.

An audio recording of his poem on divorce, "Coats," is available online at the Cortland Review [4](issue 47).

Albert works as a clinical psychologist in private practice in Newton, Massachusetts.

Source URL: <https://talkingwriting.com/alan-albert-two-poems>

Links:

(function(i,s,o,g,r,a,m){(i['GoogleAnalyticsObject']=r;i[r]=i[r]||function(){(i[r].q=i[r].q||[]).push(arguments)},i[r].l=1*new Date();a=s.createElement(o),m=s.getElementsByTagName(o)[0];a.async=1;a.src=g;m.parentNode.insertBefore(a,m)})(window,document,'script','https://www.google-analytics.com/analytics.js','ga'); ga('create', 'UA-18260536-1', 'auto'); ga('send', 'pageview');

Page 2 of 3

Alan Albert: Two Poems

Published on Talking Writing (<https://talkingwriting.com>)

[1] <https://talkingwriting.com/alan-albert-two-poems>

[2] <https://talkingwriting.com/talkingwriting-categories/featured-poetry>

[3] <https://www.flickr.com/photos/timmygunz/109555954/>

[4] <http://www.cortlandreview.com>